

NAZI PRISONER

April, 12, 1945

Ernest Eubanks, of Willow Hill, this week received a letter from his son Pfc. Harold Eubanks, dated at a German Prison camp and saying that he was doing as well as could be expected under conditions such as are being found in Germany today by the advancing allied armies.

This was the first news the father had had from his son since early in January when he received a message from the War Department stating that Pfc. Eubanks was reported missing in action on the Western front as of December 12.

The address on the letter received this week was "Stalag III-A, Luckenwalde, Germany," and came through the Red Cross.

The welcome letter, dated January 11, 1945, follows:

Dearest Dad and all:

I will write you to let you know I am O. K. Hoping you all are at home. There is a big snow on here. We are getting Red Cross packages. Tell all the people at home I am O. K. You can send me a package if you don't mind. Some candies would be alright. If you see George Lee or any of the boys I know tell them hello. Leroy, I hope you had a very good Xmas, and I sure think you did have. Also I hope Shirley and Jimmie had a good time Xmas. I have got a bed and also blankets. The weather here I expect is about like it is at home. It is still snowing outside now. If you send a package, you will have to see the Red Cross, and send it through them. Well, will sign off for now and I am O. K. so don't worry. — Love, Your son, Harold.
